Université de Moncton
Shippagan, New Brunswick

This program is designed for second language teachers who wish to address specific aspects of teaching French as a second language: language, didactics, etc. Courses are built around a series of educational activities that allow participants to evolve in a multidimensional approach. Trainees are invited to participate in an educational project designed around three components: language, education and language practice.

About the program:

- The language component allows course participants to improve both their oral and writing skills, based on their actual knowledge and in response to their needs.
- The educational component gives course participants a theoretical approach they can later integrate with their own teaching methods.
- The language practice component allows course participants to live in French during their stay in the Acadian Peninsula and gives them the chance to discover a stunningly beautiful region and a rich culture.
